

The Pleasure Principle

Looking to take the chill out of winter? These products—all geared toward feminine pleasure—are guaranteed to heat things up. They're also stylish enough so that they need not be stashed in a nightstand drawer. Jimmyjane's Ember massage candles are available in three aphrodisiac blends, each a pairing of two accords designed to provide energy and create a mood. Habanero + Grapefruit is bright and energetic, for example, while Ginger + Date is warm and engaging. An added bonus: Extinguish the flame and the wax can be dripped onto your partner and used as a massage balm. Oh! Sensual Health Cream, created in the Netherlands, contains L-arginine, an amino acid said to increase blood circulation when topically applied, while massage oil from Kiki De Montparnasse nurtures with jojoba oil and titillates with a special aromatic blend. Naughty has never looked so nice.

From the top: Kama Sutra Oil of Love, $14, drugstore.com; Booty Parlor Add Magic Lubricant, $16, Victoria's Secret; Oh! Sensual Health Cream, $48, beauty.com; Kiki De Montparnasse Massage Oil, $50, kikidm.com; Jimmyjane Ember Massage Candle, $48, Studio at Fred Segal, jimmyjane.com; Agent Provocateur Menage a Trois, $110, Agent Provocateur, Bloomingdale's

